

Speaking fluent Italian is not a make or break.

Realistically, if you don't plan on talking to a single native your entire trip around Italy, the only things you really need to know how to say are yes, no and where's the UN? But if one day, you finally decide it's time to mingle with the locals, here are a few lines to get you at least into the next morning.

Directions:

Print and place into your wallet. Next time you're in Italy fumbling around for the proper lira to pay your lunch tab, glance at this. Choose the line that best suits your situation.

I am a millionaire in the United States.

Io sono milionario negli stati uniti.

I am a multi-millionaire in the United States.

Io sono multimilionario negli stati uniti.

I have a very large trust fund.

Io avere a grande fondo fiduciario.

How do you say "please" in Italian?

Come dite "please" in italiano?

Note: You should never use the same line twice. Check back for new languages.
